Deal ends logging blockade

A BLOCKADE involving two Nass Valley villages and which stopped a company from logging for more than 30 days was to come down noon yesterday.

The blockade was put up last month by residents of New Aiyansh to protest plans by Sim Gan Forest Industries to log on traditional New Aiyansh lands.

The agreement to end the blockade followed extensive negotiations between the village of Gitwinksihlkw, which owns Sim Gan, and New Aiyansh.

Those talks came after Sim Gan got a Supreme Court injunction and an enforcement order March 11 to end the blockade. The injunction named nine individuals and the Gitakdamix (New Aiyansh) band council.

Speaking yesterday morning, Gitwinksihlkw chief councillor Perry Azak said an agreement had been reached between the two villages.

"The injunction is going to stop and the blockade is coming down effective noon today," said Azak.

The blockade went up on a logging road leading into an area in which Sim Gan has a cutting permit granted by the B.C. Forest Service.

That area is on traditional New Aiyansh lands. One corner also borders land known as Indian Reserve No. 1 and allocated to New Aiyansh.

"It's been a tough month since this started," said Azak. "It's affected our logging for 35 days so far. Thirty five days is a lot to lose."

He said there has been an arrangement made to provide economic benefits to New Aiyansh elders whose land is affected. Asak was reluctant to give details.

Azak said the injunction application and its accompanying enforcement order was a last resort on the part of Sim Gan.

No other logging traffic was affected by the New Aiyansh blockade.

It first went up in mid-

February and was moved last week to be more visible to those travelling the road between the Cranberry Junction and New Aiyansh.

The blockade's first appearance and subsequent relocation both came when leaders of the two villages were away at land claims negotiations.

Residents of the two villages had tried without success at the end of February to reach agreement.

New Aiyansh council members at the time of the first blockade said they weren't happy with the lack of buffer zones between the Sim Gan cutting area and their land.

Insp. Gil Yard, of RCMP Prince Rupert subdivision, said police were prepared to act to end the blockade but decided to hold off while negotiations were underway.

Late on Monday night, he said, RCMP were called off and told an agreement had been reached.

ROLL UP, roll up and see the amazing dancing bears at this year's ice show extravaganza! Above, that's Krystel, Erin and Leah Kofced who'll be among the Terrace Skating club members entertaining crowds at the arena this weekend.

Enjoy all the fun of the fair

THE GREATEST Show on Ice glides out into the arena spotlight this Friday and Saturday.

That's when the Terrace Skating Club will be putting on this year's ice extravaganza, the theme being A Trip to the Fair.

Marching bands, a ring master and animals galore will entertain the crowds at three performances.

The first is Friday at 7 p.m., the others taking place Saturday at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m.

Special guest this year will be Kari-Lee Nustad, 16.

The Houston skater has successfully completed her Gold Dance, Freeskate and Artistic tests.

This month she will be going for her 7th Figure and Junior Competitive tests this month.

Nustad took the gold in Senior Ladies at last year's B.C. Winter Games in Kitimat and this year finished seventh in the provincial Novice Ladies.

Tickets for the show are available at Flowers A La Carte, Jeans North, All Seasons, Copperville III, Wayside Grocery and Agar Red & White.

Adult tickets cost $5, seniors and students $4, kids to 12 years $3 and anyone under the age of two years get in free.

City taking look at illegal businesses

HOME BUSINESSES operating illegally in R1 residential zones will find out this spring whether they can continue to do so.

Home occupations are regulated under the city's business licensing by-law.

Subject to certain conditions, it allows home occupations only in R2 to R7 zones.

While confirming such operations are prohibited in R1 neighbourhoods, permits director Bob Lafleur said the city has not only been allowing them to do so, but also issuing them business licences.

However, he added, the operators have been required to sign a "waiver".

In doing so, Lafleur explained, they recognize they are operating contrary to the by-law and agree that, if and when the city decides to enforce the by-law, they will move out.

Now the entire question of what home occupations should be allowed in what zones is under review.

Lafleur said the move comes in response to unfair competition complaints from businesses located in the commercial core.

The home occupations concept was supposed to cover offices and hand made goods, he explained, a way people could get their business "up and running" until they had a strong enough base to move up to commercial premises.

It was not intended to allow people to bring in manufactured goods and invite people to their home to purchase them.

But that was what has been happening, Lafleur said, citing picture framing, clothing and cleaning product businesses as examples.

If a home-based business offered a product that could be bought off the shelf at a local store, that was unfair competition, he maintained.

An example of the distinction would be someone selling hand made children's clothing against someone simply buying in manufactured clothes from an outside supplier.

Lafleur said his department was now preparing amendments to the by-law which would define what home occupations were allowed where.

He anticipated a report on the proposals would be ready to go to council in a couple of weeks.

Rates protested

WATER RIGHTS officials are still wading through the letters they've received protesting proposed water rate increases in upper Thornhill.

Woodlands Utilities Ltd. wants to increase the rate charged domestic users from $10 a month to $18.

Other fee changes requested include increasing the turn-on fee from $20 to $50, and adding a new $25 customer administration fee.

A petition of at least 50 signatures and about 100 individual letters had been received by the Feb. 28 deadline, said Rick Couroux, secretary to the Comptroller of Water Rights in Victoria.

He said a recommendation should be made within a couple of weeks on whether to hold a public hearing or carry out a review of the proposed increases on the basis of submissions already received.

Woodlands says the increases are needed because revenues have not been enough to pay into a replacement account which is supposed to cover major expenses.

Under the new proposal, 15 per cent of rates collected would be set aside.

Bargaining will hurt, say teachers

Larger classes predicted

PROVINCE-WIDE bargaining of teachers' contracts will mean larger class sizes in Terrace schools, predicts Terrace District Teachers' Union president Cathy Lambright.

"Teachers in Terrace have given up things to get lower class sizes," she said. "We now stand to lose that."

She also predicted Terrace teachers will get lost in the shuffle and issues that are unique to the north will be ignored at the provincial bargaining table.

"I've very angry. I'm very disillusioned. I'm very concerned," Lambright added. "I feel like I've been kicked from pillar to post."

The plan goes against everything the NDP government promised in its education platform, she said.

She said the government's plan is discriminatory because some unionized school workers — like School District 88's CUPE maintenance and secretarial workers — will continue to have the right to negotiate on a district-by-district basis, but teachers won't.

"It's alright for CUPE to bargain locally, however teachers cannot," she said. "They believe in free collective bargaining for everybody but teachers."

"And I don't think it's going to produce any long term financial benefits for either side."

School board chairman John Pousette had some reservations about the plan, but said that on balance he still supports provincial bargaining with teachers.

"Bargaining always occupied a great deal of the school district's and the teachers' time and now I think we can focus more on the main issue, which is delivering quality education."

He said he was concerned about the loss of local control over some issues.

Pousette said the north will have to be vigilant that its interests are served during provincial bargaining.

"You can't put 75 school districts together and assure equity for everybody," he said. "There's going to be a steamroller effect. And our toes may be under the rolls some days."

Skeena MLA Helmut Giesbrecht, a former teacher and former teachers' union president, expressed disappointment that the current system wasn't given more time to work.

"There was a mood that was prevailing that people were reasonable and there was an awful lot of cooperation starting to happen," he said.

He also expressed concern about the loss of local control.

"What would happen if the board wants to provide some incentives to attract teachers to a particular community," he asked. "Would you be able to do that at the provincial level?"

Giesbrecht suggested making the bargaining process more distant will breed apathy among teachers because bargaining will become too big a process for them to have influence over.

If teachers are less politically active, because they don't think their actions can get results, then there's a danger morale will decline, he added.

"I don't know how reducing morale in the workplace benefits the educational institution."

For finance minister Elizabeth Cull's statement on the bargaining change, see Page A2

Province tightens teacher bargaining

TEACHERS ARE going to find it more difficult to strike in future.

That, says finance minister Elizabeth Cull is the intent of a new bargaining system to be introduced by the province.

Cull announced last Thursday plans to use a two-tier system for negotiating teacher contracts.

The proposal calls for wages, benefits and working conditions to be handled at the provincial level.

School boards and teachers in individual districts will be able to deal only with remaining local issues, ones that will not have any significant financial impact on the district.

Since 1987, contracts have been negotiated by individual districts.

But that system hasn't worked, Cull said, adding there had been too many strikes and lockouts in the past seven years.

While teachers will still be able to strike, they will need a province-wide vote in favour of a walkout to do so.

"Getting a strike vote will be more difficult," Cull agreed.

Nor will teachers in an individual district be able to strike over a purely local issue.

Where the board and union cannot reach agreement on such an issue, it will be referred to the provincial talks for solution, she explained.

That system, Cull suggested, puts extra pressure on both sides to reach agreement at the local level.

She also predicted there would be less reliance on mediation as a way of solving contract disagreements.

Describing mediation as "a cop-out", she said resulting settlements end up costing more.

Conceding the B.C. Teachers Federation has consistently opposed province-wide bargaining, she expected that to continue, at least at the union leadership level.

However, she said, trustees, parents and "many teachers" supported the change.

"It will allow them (teachers) to get on with teaching," she added.

Cull also estimated the move to province-wide bargaining will save at least $2.5 million each round of negotiations.

More money

THE TERRACE SCHOOL board will have an extra $617,000 to work with in their 1994-95 budget.

But exactly how the 1.79 per cent budget increase will affect local spending remains to be seen.

Secretary-treasurer Barry Piersdorff noted the government has said much of the extra money will be targeted towards special education and native education programs.

Victoria has also warned districts to expect no new money for teachers' salaries and to expect required cuts in administrative spending.

"We have no idea what the outcome will be until we see the detailed numbers for this district," Piersdorff said. "It's just too early to tell."

City lowers daycare boom

THE CITY will revoke Discovery Daycare's business licence if its inspectors again find more than eight children at the facility.

Permits director Bob Lafleur issued that warning in a letter delivered to operators Mickey and Sharon Bromley last Friday morning.

The letter followed investigation of two complaints from 4700 block Hamer residents the previous day.

Lafleur said senior building inspector Paul Gipps and acting fire chief Richard Owens had visited the daycare Thursday afternoon and been told by Mickey Bromley there were 11 children on the premises.

That contravenes the local by-law which permits only eight-child daycares in R1 residential zones.

Last month council rejected a proposal to amend the zoning by-law to allow up to 20-child daycares in R1 areas.

It also declined to act on Bromley's request to issue a temporary permit to allow him time to find alternative places for half the 16 children who regularly attend the daycare.

The letter also warned Bromley the city would ask the province to revoke the Bromley's child care licence as well.

Explaining the hard line, Lafleur said council had made its decision and his department's job was to enforce that directive.

Pointing out Bromley knew what the zoning regulations said even before he bought the Hamer Ave. property and built his home daycare there, Lafleur added, "He gambled and lost."

Meanwhile Bromley may have found a solution to his problem. He explained a parent of one of the children had offered the use of her basement as a second eight-child daycare.

Bromley said Gipps had inspected the house and confirmed it would take relatively little work to bring the basement up to building code standards.

Bromley anticipated the work could be completed in approximately three weeks.

Asked why his department was not prepared to give Bromley time to effect the change, Lafleur pointed out "council did not give him an extension."

News In Brief

Provincial budget next week

PROVINCIAL TAXPAYERS will see what Premier Mike Harcourt's promise last week of no new taxes or tax hikes means March 22.

That's the date when the provincial government's budget for the 1994-95 fiscal year is released in the legislature.

Harcourt told British Columbians last week that government spending is under control and that the deficit is being cut.

But the Canadian Taxpayers Federation is worried that while there might be no more government tax hikes, fees, premiums and transfers from government-owned enterprises could go up.

Air travellers on the rise

MORE PEOPLE flew in and out of the Terrace-Kitimat airport in 1993 than did in 1992, reports airport manager Darryl Laurent. The 3.8 per cent increase works out to 86,700 people for 1993.

"It was a bit lower than our projections, but it was still an increase which not all airports could claim," said Laurent.

The 1993 figure is still a far cry from the record year of 1990 in which 104,600 people flew in and out.

The airport recently completed a major expansion, giving it the facilities to handle 500 arriving and departing passengers an hour.

There are three scheduled airlines flying into the airport — Canadian Airlines, Air B.C. and Central Mountain Airlines of Smithers.

New food bank home sought

THE TERRACE Churches Food Bank is looking for a new home.

It now uses a former home on Sparks St. owned by the Evangelical Free Church but that'll be torn down to make room for parking spaces and access. The parking plan is part of a development which has so far resulted in new premises for the church.

Food bank spokesman Terri Elkiw said there is no immediate rush to leave the building but she does expect the food bank to be in a new location for the fall.

The food distribution period this week is the last of the season. The food bank closes over the spring and summer months and opens in November for a new season.

Weather affects landings

JANUARY WASN'T the best month for landings by passenger jets at the Terrace-Kitimat airport, indicate airport statistics.

Of 200 scheduled landings by Canadian Airlines and Air B.C.'s jets, only 142 took place.

That works out to 71 per cent, far below the average of 96 per cent, said airport manager Darryl Laurent. "It's pretty poor, even by our standards."

February's weather was much better — of 202 scheduled flights into here, there were 184 landings. That makes for an average of 91 per cent.

Highways work to start

EXPECT PERIODIC delays for the next six to seven months on two Hwy16 projects in Gitsegúela and just east of the village.

One project involves replacing the concrete deck and guard rails of the Kitsegúela River Bridge with a wider deck and a sidewalk fence. Work will also take place on the approaches to the bridge.

The second one is the construction of an overpass and pedestrian walkway over the highway to connect the two sides of the village.

Highways officials say most of the delays will take place from the bridge project because traffic will be restricted to single lane.

Woman faces bankruptcy

Marge Samarco

A THORNHILL woman says she's going into bankruptcy because she can't afford to pay back UI benefits.

Marge Samarco's troubles began nearly a year ago when she left a job, citing stress from her job and difficulty with a manager.

Samarco already had an existing claim and began to receive UI benefits until unemployment officials turned down her reasons for leaving and cut her off.

Her reasons weren't accepted under new rules. They tightened up conditions under which people can voluntarily quit work and receive benefits.

Samarco took the decision to a three-member appeal board but it found in favour of the unemployment insurance commission.

"The board was sympathetic to the situation the appellant found herself in. However they could not consider this situation so intolerable as to justify quitting at the time she did," the board wrote in a July 1993 decision.

By then the commission determined it had incorrectly paid Samarco just over $1,500 and asked for the money back.

That left Samarco frustrated, saying the unemployment insurance commission was at fault in the first place for paying benefits they then wanted returned.

"I followed all the right channels and did what I had to do," said Samarco. "They should have not paid me. It is their fault and I should not have to repay it."

In addition to having to pay back the UI money, Samarco lost her car because she couldn't keep up the financing payments.

Fortunately, Samarco found a job in Thornhill within walking distance of her home.

That employer received at the end of January a letter from the unemployment insurance commission saying it was taking 20 per cent of Samarco's net pay to cover the overpayment.

"In January they took $197. In February they took $154. With what's left, I'm way below welfare levels. I can't live on that and am just going to have to declare personal bankruptcy. I have to," said Samarco last week.

Even paying $25 a pay period would be too much, she continued.

"I just don't think it's fair they are doing this on my low wage. And I know if it's happening to me, it's happening to others," said Samarco.

A commission official said federal privacy regulations prevent discussion of individual cases.

But the official did say Samarco can apply to have the 20 per cent repayment schedule reduced to fit her financial situation.

Very clever

IF HEALTH minister Paul Ramsey ever needs to consider another line of work, he might try magic. That was some rabbit he pulled out of the hat a couple of weeks ago in deciding to add a second orthopedic surgeon in the northwest.

The decision contradicts one made by Mr. Ramsey just several months ago. Then, acting upon a recommendation from a 1992 health study, Mr. Ramsey announced the orthopedic surgical service in Kitimat was to be transferred to Prince Rupert. That led to massive protests in Kitimat and potential political problems for the NDP.

Mr. Ramsey's solution was to keep the service in Kitimat. To appease Prince Rupert, he announced a second northwest orthopedic surgeon would be placed in that city.

Although this would appear to have solved a troublesome situation, the provincial government has now added approximately $1 million to the provincial deficit. That's about what it'll take to open and run an orthopedic service in Prince Rupert. This seems strange when the government is running around at every other opportunity telling people how much money it is not spending.

But perhaps Mr. Ramsey has created a clever trap. Northwest health care decisions on budget allocations and services will soon be made by a regional health care council. It'll consist of the same groups, people and communities who couldn't agree on the orthopedic surgical service.

One day that council may not have enough money to support two orthopedic services. The decision then will be much more difficult to make. Yet it won't be up to Mr. Ramsey or his successor. Mr. Ramsey's short term gain now may very well lead to somebody else's long term pain later on.

It's illegal

SUPPOSE A group of prominent businessmen, backed by various pension funds and a big time partner from south of the border, announced plans to develop a massive marijuana farm in the Fraser Valley. "Sure," they would say, "We know it's against the law but we're convinced the provincial government will change its mind once they hear of the economic benefits that will come about."

Sounds pretty far fetched but that's about what's happening with the multi-million proposal to take a piece of Vancouver waterfront and turn it into a huge casino to vacuum the pockets of locals and tourists.

In the rush toward bright lights and the big time, most everybody seems to forget that gambling for profit in this province is against the law.

What's worse is the attitude of the NDP. This is supposed to be the party which seeks to elevate humanity beyond the kind of greed exemplified by blackjack, craps and the like. Instead the party seems to have its eye on the next election. The need to produce anything to dazzle voters is overriding every other consideration.

Mike's ready to roll the dice

VICTORIA — If ever a politician's words have come back to haunt him, it's got to be Premier Harcourt's previous stance on gambling for profit.

Here's what Mayor Mike Harcourt of Vancouver said in 1986 when then premier Bill Vander Zalm entertained the idea of introducing Vegas-style casinos:

"It's an open invitation to the mob, and all that it will bring with it, all the dirty money in terms of raking off profit from gambling, the corruption of officials, extortion, prostitution, drugs and money being laundered."

Seven years later, he is singing a slightly different tune. He's "ambivalent" about casinos that operate for profit, he says, but he's reserving his final verdict until fall when the government's review of gambling regulations will be completed.

What makes the difference in the premier's attitude between then and now is a proposed $750 million Vancouver waterfront development, complete with 1,000-room hotel-convention centre, cruise ship facilities and resort casino.

The proponents of the scheme are no slouches. Despite the 15,000 permanent jobs the project is expected to create, they know that's not enough to swing the government's support behind it. So they threw in some appealing bait.

FROM THE CAPITAL

To start with, union pension funds are to get a 10.5 per cent ownership in the complex. First Nations are to get another 10 per cent share. The project also contains provisions to build housing for the poor. But that's not all.

Jack Poole, the long-time Liberal and millionaire developer, who spearheads the forces that back the project, has promised to give Vancouver East Side residents, who are among the city's poorest, first crack to the construction jobs as well as the permanent jobs the project would create.

These guys are pushing all the right buttons, and it's easy to see why the government would find the proposal appealing, a few wrinkles notwithstanding.

One of the wrinkles is the direct involvement — some call it a conflict of interest — the government has in the proposed development. The developer is a company called VLC Properties Ltd., a firm in which the government has a 16-per cent share.

Headed by Poole, VLC's board of directors also includes an array of powerful union bosses, including B.C. Federation of Labor president Ken Georgetti. VLC would own a 20-per-cent share of the casino. As you can see, the plot thickens.

Now, what about Harcourt's scathing assessment of gambling-for-profit seven years ago? Not to worry, VLC has run a security check on Mirage Resort Inc. Of Nevada, the second-largest gaming company in North America, which would own 49 per cent of the complex and run the gaming facility.

The result of the check, according to VLC, is that gambling in Nevada is carefully monitored and provides no opening for organized crime.

All of which leaves us with one question: which Harcourt will prevail, the one who would have nothing to do with gambling seven years ago or the one who's clutching his new found ambivalence?

I put my money on the reformed Mike. The inducements of the proposal are too great to be ignored. I also don't agree with those who see the mob behind every roulette wheel and slot machine.

I can't say whether or not the mob has a stake in Reno or Las Vegas, but I know that there is no organized crime in any of the famous European casinos. If the operation is run tightly and closely monitored, the mob won't move in.

So, let it rest and let the government make a profit on behalf of the taxpayer. And let's keep the money in British Columbia that now goes to Nevada.

The casino-hotel-convention centre-cruise ship proposal is the best thing to come along since Expo 86 which, by the way, was vehemently opposed by Harcourt.

A last letter to John Candy

Dear John Candy:

You stunned me with your sudden leavetaking. There I was looking forward to a coffee break soon, when CBC news announced, "Actor John Candy died this morning of a heart attack in Durango, Mexico where he was filming a western."

Later, the news said you were one day away from wrapping up the movie, Wagons East. I do hope moviemakers will be able to complete the movie without you so your final work won't be dropped into the garbage can.

News stories say you made anywhere from 37 to 15 movies; reports differ. So far I've seen only a few — Uncle Buck, Home Alone, and the one where you play a policeman and Maureen O'Hara is your Irish mother intent on getting you hitched.

Now that you've written Finis to your movie making career, your videos will be so popular, I'll have to put my name on a long list to rent them.

THROUGH BIFOCALS
CLAUDETTE SANDECKI

I missed you at the Gemini awards 10 days ago. Sure, Valerie Pringle did make passing mention of both your and Tommy Sexton's untimely absence at the ceremonies. But not a single Gemini winner hailed you or your achievements.

Were they so jealous of your comedy success they couldn't bring themselves to say something laudatory about you? Or did they fear breaking down into a sobbing puddle? Perhaps the program was so scripted and rehearsed that, lacking your improvisational skill, they couldn't find a way to slip in an off-the-cuff remark to note your unexpected death only two days earlier.

Even master of the ad lib, Frank Shuster, though he shared the stage with Johnny Wayne at least in memory, ignored your contribution to Canadian humour.

I understand you smoked heavily, and tried every diet invented to trim, your size from 300 pounds. Your SCTV buddy, Eugene Levy, interviewed by Peter Mansbridge on Prime Time News, said you were sensitive about your weight, and well aware your father suffered a heart attack age 35.

It didn't help that you were a workaholic, driven to accomplishing something every waking moment. Now you've abruptly run out of time at 43, cutting short what we all hoped would be a long drawn out future filled with more funny movies and TV appearances.

You somehow built a career as a Canadian comic without ever letting me know you were a husband and a father. How did you do that? For your wife Rosemary Hobor, your 13-year-old daughter Jennifer, and your 9-year-old son Christopher, I'm sure your sudden death has left a gigantic gap in their lives, physically and emotionally.

I can't do anything to make things better.

I imagine you're in heaven now, dressed in a toga and thong slippers, gathered with other Canadian comedians — Johnny Wayne, Tommy Sexton, Stephen Leacock, Sarah Binks — chuckling over the antics of Codco and the barbs of the Air Farce, while munching potato chips and swigging beer.

But there is no joy on the Canadian scene.

The case for a natural creek

The city must say 'no'

An open letter to:
Mayor and Council
City of Terrace

Around 1915, Mr. and Mrs. Howe moved from New Brunswick to a home on the bench just above what is now the Eby Street hatchery. They moved out to B.C. because of the woman's health.

Unfortunately, to get water for the home, Mrs. Howe had to go down a rough trail her husband built on the sidehill to the spring.

Of course, she also had to pack the water back up. This didn't do much for her health and, after returning to New Brunswick, she shortly thereafter died.

This story comes from a tape made by former Caledonia High School students while interviewing one of Terrace's oldtimers on the history of Howe Creek.

It is a good example of the kind of resource this waterway is. Other students have used the area to catalogue the plant, insects and other wildlife of the area.

The creek has been the focus of attention for still other students who have studied its water flows, monitored its rate of erosion and investigated its origin as a main channel of the ancient Skeena River.

In recent years, Caledonia students have built two bridges over the creek (one at DeJong Crescent and the other at the property being considered for development at McConnell and Munro) and have cleaned tons of garbage out of the creek.

Terrace will undoubtedly grow in population. We know from the experience of other towns and cities throughout the world that waterways like this one are very valuable assets in a city.

Some jurisdictions are spending

THE MANY faces of the Howe Creek area were demonstrated by Terrace Green Belt Association to municipal officials and others during a tour last fall.

big bucks to open up and restore previously culverted creeks. How has the City of Terrace treated the creek?

The City of Terrace has historically treated Howe Creek as a drainage ditch, and continues to do so. It became a make work project for the unemployed in Terrace's early days, when it was dug out by hand, from Lanfear to Kalum, to enhance drainage in the Horseshoe.

Within the last 10 years, city machinery scraped it out between Parkside school and Labelle. Culverts deliver storm water from the bench.

And recently, all of the water from Terrace Mountain has been diverted into the city storm sewer at Parkside school. These changes may have made sense at the time, but we should start to reverse the process now.

We all know that many people already appreciate this creek. And we all acknowledge that it is difficult to say no to developers, particularly in a small town where we all know the people involved.

However, sooner or later limits to growth are reached and saying no becomes necessary. I say it is that time now.

City councillors should be looking after the current and long term interests of the majority of the community, and not just the financial interests of a few investor-developers.

It seems to me that a reasonable solution to the Howe Creek controversy would involve:

1. the mayor and city councillors saying no to both the rezoning applications.

2. the city creating a long term community plan for the Howe Creek corridor, including bylaws

a. that encourage getting the creek out of culverts, prevents new culverting, and shortens existing culverts

b. that eliminates any new development between the brow of the bench on the north, and any existing development on the south

c. that establish a budget

i. for acquisition of vacant land around the creek including the two properties involved in the rezoning application.

ii. for the construction and maintenance of a trail and footbridges along the length of the creek, and

iii. for the gradual construction of a replacement storm drain system for the Horseshoe area which removes only excess water from the developed areas of the Horseshoe (i.e. the south side of the creek).

Sincerely yours,
Glenn Griveau,
Terrace, B.C.

Upset at daycare attitude

Dear Sir:

I'm very upset to learn the negative attitude toward the operation of a day care by Mickey and Sharon Bromley in the R1 zone.

It states that churches and day care centers may operate in a R1 zone as a small business. If the objectors do not like the name day care, maybe the Bromleys should call the facility "Church of the Golden Rule School". Children would then be allowed to attend.

There are so many illegal centers in Terrace or should I say baby sitting centers in private homes as was stated at the Feb. 28 council meeting. One such facility confines children to a basement suite for their stay. Is this facility certified and run by trained personnel? Does it matter to the parents of these children? Are all safety and health regulations met?

If the complainers don't wish for growth in a community they should move to the bush and complain about the wild life or go to a quiet old folks home.

Murray Bromley,
Kitimat, B.C.

Too good to be true

Re: Ed Papals' letter Feb. 23, 1994.

Dear Sir:

A salesman indeed! Like all deals that sound too good to be true, this one is suspect. If people can easily earn a "conservative $3,840/month" operating a family daycare, then why do we have such a shortage of licensed spaces?

For people considering this as employment, the daycare licensing office has an estimated budget for the average family daycare. The take home pay is $1,291 a month.

That's for at least nine hours a day, no lunch break, no coffee break, no medical, dental or pension and you surrender your home to accommodate the children.

Ask anyone who provides care what they do to earn their living.
Veralynn Munson,
Terrace, B.C.

In defence of teachers

An open letter to:

Mr. Carreiro:

I'm responding as an individual, and not as a union representative, to your March 2 "Tired of whining" letter.

I would like to offer a different perspective on the "facts" which you have presented to the public.

While it is true that I am expected to be instructing classes for an average of 5.5 to 6 hours per day, it is not true that I work 5.5 to 6 hours a day. Each day requires hours of additional marking and preparation time. You cannot face a group of 25-30 teenagers or children hourly without some kind of plan. The success of your instruction, the delivery of the curriculum, greatly depends on your efforts in advance of the time that you meet your students.

It is impossible (and not even desirable) to do significant subject preparation during class. In the six years that I have been at my school, I have participated in hundreds of hours of seminars and meetings relating to my job which have occurred well beyond the hours of non-instructional days. These additional meetings are arranged during lunch and/or after school. Many teachers participate for their sense of professional commitment to the school, or as part of their professional duty, as the situation demands.

I usually do mark every day (for a minimum of two to three hours each day) and I still mark for several hours most weekends. During busier testing periods, it is common for me to mark for four, five, and even six hours at a time.

It is not my opinion that teachers "slack off and dump their responsibility in the laps of parents."

Though teaching has many rewards and most teachers are comfortably paid, pursuing a career in teaching for personal gain does not seem the motivation of most of my colleagues. Many of us, I believe, have chosen teaching, and continue in this career, because it is rewarding to work with and teach the youth of our society — even as our schools change through time.

I work in a school with over 30 teachers, and my job involves meeting other teachers. I think we are not the self-pitying lot you would have us to be. I personally find the information that you share with the public to be very damaging to the goals which should be shared by the public, educators and administrators.

C.A. Cebullak,
Terrace, B.C.

Lands needed for drainage

Dear Sir:

I would like to express my thanks to municipal council for having held the special meeting Feb. 24 to discuss the impact of the Howe Creek Investments and the Coxford rezoning applications on public enjoyment of the Howe Creek nature corridor.

This meeting differed from others in several respects. Council members became involved in discussions and gave some direction as to how they might be expected to apply the Official Community Plan.

Both developers expressed some interest in relocating if fair compensation and/or a land swap might be worked out. Local residents were asked to consider limited development as a means of helping to finance a buy out of the remaining undeveloped land.

In evaluating the suitability of the Coxford rezoning application, councillors were asked to test its validity under three possible claims:

"Loss of this area would greatly reduce the value of the Howe Creek trail as a nature preserve."

1. the application is of a minor technical nature that benefits the applicant without adversely affecting any innocent parties;

2. the application benefits the applicant at the expense of others but some trade off is possible making the application acceptable to all;

3. the application benefits the applicant at the expense of others, who find all trade offs unacceptable, but approval of the application is considered to provide a significant net benefit to the community as a whole.

It was argued that the Coxford application failed under all three claims and that approval of the application would undermine the credibility of the Official Community Plan.

The councillors were asked to reject the application but seek some fair settlement with the developer and property owners.

The arguments against the Howe Creek Investments development have been framed differently from those against the Coxford development.

The 10 acre Howe Creek Investments property is an important wet land that supports a diversity of animal life and is the head water for Howe Creek.

Loss of this area would greatly reduce the value of the Howe Creek trail as a nature preserve.

The Howe Creek Investments land is also an important component in the Terrace storm drainage system. The wet lands act as a catch basin for water flowing from Halliwell, Skoglund and North Sparks to the north, Westview and Skeenaview to the east, and Kalum to the south.

Water from a total of nine drainage pipes flows freely across the property before being collected at the southwest corner and directed to the south through the Eby storm drain or west as Howe Creek.

The total cross sectional area of drainage pipes carrying water to the property exceeds the area of pipes carrying water away from the property.

During periods of heavy rain the wet lands expand and thereby increase the carrying capacity of our drainage system. As development continues, the importance of the wet lands will increase.

It is hoped that municipal council can obtain these lands as part of their commitment to park development.

Yours sincerely,
John Campbell

A letter from the heart

They need a place to live

Dear Sir:

Four months, 23 days in a two-bedroom local motel unit.

Our family of six gamely surmounts all odds, is surviving the small surroundings, passing the days keeping their spirits up and hoping that one day they can move to a larger home.

But so far all our efforts have been dashed by rents that are too high or being told our family is too big for a three-bedroom home.

They should see where we reside now!

I find it very distressing that certain people take great pleasure in dashing the hopes of poor folks. I sure hope they sleep good!

People often ask me why I moved my family here to Terrace. I tell them this is where I grew up and people were nice, then.

I moved here seven months ago with all great hopes. My wife and I plan to return to school and get a college degree. Right now we are just waiting for space to come available at Northwest Community College.

I moved here because I did not want our children to become a meaningless statistic. It is ironic that we have become another statistic: homeless!

We have tried many avenues, but to no avail. People are sympathetic, understanding, even helpful, but still we have no permanent address.

The local societies rattle their swords and raise their voices, but we are still here.

Our primary goal is still intact, however. We will go to NWCC for upgrading and a college degree.

We are trying to instill in our children that education is not impossible, that it would have been better if we'd finished the first time.

We will remain here for as long as it takes.

We are happy to be together as a family no matter where we stay. But a larger home is our dream.

We do have a vehicle and can travel within reason. I am a self-employed roofer, have many hobbies and have acquired many construction skills.

But for now my main interest is my children. They are eight to 12 years old.

We do not want or need hand-outs, just someone to understand we are able to care for a home and keep it satisfactorily neat.

Our furniture is in storage and we do have our own rug and upholstery steam cleaner.

All we need is a larger home and I sure hope someone out there can help.

Samuel Lincoln

Car contest

WOULD YOU like to win a car?

A lot of curlers hope to do that next month.

They are taking part in the annual Loggers Bonspiel. And there's a special event that could result in some curlers winning a car.

Here's how it works. There are four people in each curling rink. Each gets to throw one rock. If all four rocks wind up in the middle of the curling circle, all four people win a car.

There are also cash prizes for people who come close.

The Loggers Bonspiel takes place March 30 - April 3. The car contest is sponsored by The Terrace Standard and McEwan GM.

Championships here

THE TOP 'AA' PeeWee hockey teams in B.C. will be here next week for the provincial championships.

The Terrace team has a lot of first-year players but coach Steve Smyth says they have been playing well together and have as good a chance as many of the teams.

Smyth hopes there will be big crowds at the arena to cheer on the Terrace PeeWees. That kind of support will give the team a big lift.

The tournament starts Sunday, March 20 with the final taking place Thursday, March at 6 p.m. For only $15 you can buy a pass which gets you into all games except for Thursday's semi-final and final. Tickets for that day cost just $5.

BUSINESS REVIEW

Out & About

Now open is The Bargain! Shop in the former Woolworth's location.

The March 14 first official day of business was about 10 days ahead of schedule, said manager George Demedeiros.

"All of our stock arrived on time and we've been working long hours," he said heading into last weekend.

The switch from Woolworth to The Bargain! Shop is happening in every other part of the country.

Tomorrow's the grand opening of Terrace Home Hardware.

On hand will be Terrace mayor Jack Talstra to cut the ribbon.

Home Hardware, operated here by partners Henry Stiksma and Norm Mantel, opened last November and employs six people.

"We've been pleased with the response," said Stiksma.

Also on hand will be Home Hardware representatives.

Scheduled for opening the end of April is a Subway franchise on Lakelse.

It's going in beside the Hawes optometry clinic and is owned by former Kootenay resident Dianne Ramage.

She arrived in town last week to oversee construction and installation of equipment.

Subway sells sandwiches, muffins and soups.

Ramage said as many as 20 full and part time jobs will be created.

Under consideration is opening 24 hours a day but that decision will come after the outlet is up and running.

NEW TO the city is North Coast Health and Fitness, due to open the middle of next month.

It's owned by sisters-in-law Kim Croot and Audrey Fillion.

The idea for a fitness establishment grew out of Croot's membership in a Prince George centre.

When she moved here to join her husband recently, Croot decided there was a need in the local fitness market.

"It just all fell into place," said Croot of the venture.

Skeena Broadcasters has promoted news reporter John Crawford to the position of news director.

He's now responsible for TV and radio news at the company's outlets in Smithers, Kitimat, Terrace and Prince Rupert.

Crawford came to Skeena Broadcasters three and a half years ago after spending two years with another radio company in Smithers.

The company is hiring a person to replace Crawford.

Mall add on possible

A SKEENA MALL spokesman says word is expected within a month about a plan to expand the Kmart store.

"There is certainly a need by Kmart to expand and now it's a case of when and if it's going to happen," said Carroll MacLean of L and C Management.

"We'll have a better idea within a month," he added. "We're hopeful it'll be positive."

The mall will have to provide more parking if Kmart does expand, said MacLean.

One idea under consideration is erecting a parkade type structure at the mall.

That way the mall won't have to look elsewhere for parking spots, said MacLean.

"At one time we tried to obtain use of land from CN for staff parking but it didn't work out," he said.

MacLean said the cost and type of a parking structure still has to be determined.

SOME CITY businesses have found a new way to provide storage space within the industrial zone.

Boxcar use found to be perfectly fine

By MALCOLM BAXTER

RAIL BOXCARS may look out of place outside city businesses, but they are perfectly legal in certain zones.

Councillor Ruth Hallock raised the issue at a recent city council meeting.

Following a phone call from a resident who'd spotted one of the rail cars on a Keith Ave. property, she had passed the complaint to by-law enforcement officer Frank Bowsher.

Hallock said Bowsher's investigations had revealed boxcars were already being used for storage at a couple of other locations as well.

Later, Bowsher confirmed the box cars are entitled to be at the locations.

That's because all three properties in question — Riverside Industries, Terrace Builders and Your Decor — are within industrial zones.

"In those zones you can bring them in and use them for storage," Bowsher said.

Nor do they need a permit from the city, as was the case with Aico trailers brought in by Skeena Cellulose and Skeena Sawmills.

Bowsher said the reason is the by-law says no permit is required for a structure less than 300 sq.ft. in area.

However, the city could exercise some control on where the boxcars were positioned on the lot.

For example, fire safety considerations would require the cars to be a set distance away from a wooden structure, he explained.

And, Bowsher noted, the businesses involved are being asked to paint the cars "to look half-decent."

City hall fills job vacancy

THE CITY has hired an economic development officer, filling a vacancy that's existed for a year.

Ken Veldman, a graduate of Caledonia who also attended Northwest Community College, is expected here the end of the month.

He's now working for an association of senior federal civil servants in Vancouver.

Veldman has a bachelor's degree in business administration from Simon Fraser University.

Past work experience includes stints with federal departments of industry and western diversification.

Veldman replaces Peter Monteith who left in the spring of 1993.

The position is partially subsidized by the provincial government.

Highways probes northwest opinion

REGIONAL HIGHWAYS officials are soon to find out what northwest residents think of the job they're doing.

It's happening through an eight-page survey mailed to 3,800 homes and businesses in the northwest.

It asks for rankings on highway quality, why some sections are considered better quality than others and where and what improvements could be made.

But it also asks for opinions on the kind of road condition information available through the ministry or the various private maintenance companies.

The idea is to give highway officials a complete picture of northwest attitudes and opinions, says survey co-ordinator Edith Wong.

She needs nearly 900 returned surveys for an adequate sample size and as of late last week, had tabulated results from more than 400.

"The response has just been excellent," said Wong of the response.

To her knowledge, the survey is the only one of its kind going on in the province.

There's also space for comments and Wong's pleased people are taking the time to write down their observations.

"People are very pleased with what Highways has been doing up here the last couple of years. There's been a lot of good suggestions," she said.

"This will definitely help the ministry," Wong added.

The surveys are to be returned by March 18 and the results will be ready the end of April.

*****
The project is part of Wong's requirements as a student in Northwest Community College's business administration program.

MORE THAN 400 surveys have already been returned to Edith Wong who is compiling information on what northwest residents think of their regional highway system.

She's in her second year and the four month work co-op term is intended to give students a chance to put their academic training to practical use.

*****
Also being evaluated are ways to increase the visibility of highway shoulder markings during bad weather.

Highway 37 between Terrace and Kitimat was one of three test locations across the province.

Wider lines were laid down as were reflective glass beads.

City ponders paving plan

THE CITY is considering a more aggressive approach in tackling the paving of the 4700 block Davis Ave.

It follows an appearance before council by block resident Paul Parhar who made the latest in a long line of paving pleas.

Pointing out the piece of road between Eby and Sparks is the only gravel one left in the downtown area, he reminded councillors of the dust problem residents faced each year.

Responding to a question from mayor Jack Talstra, administrator Bob Hallsor said the engineering department was already looking at the matter.

The problem in the past has been the city does not have the required 66ft. right-of-way for the full length of the block.

Because of that, past councils have declined paving requests.

This time, however, engineering is preparing a cost estimate to include the purchase of the land needed to complete the right-of-way.

At the present, there is no vehicular access from that block to Sparks because the land is in private hands.

Asked if that meant the city was prepared to expropriate the land (compel the owner to sell), Hallsor confirmed the city might go that route if there were no other choice.

"We're hoping it might be given to us," he said, adding, "We're looking at all the financial aspects."

Hallsor said there are only two properties involved at the Sparks end of the block.

Council Shorts

Commission workshop set

THE CITY will spend up to $1,000 on a workshop for members of various city boards and commissions.

The purpose of the workshop will be to explain what the relationship is between council and those voluntary bodies and to establish annual goals for each.

The suggestion for the workshop came from the Parks and Recreation Advisory commission. It is planned to hold the session within the next month.

Heritage tags approved

COUNCIL HAS agreed to designate Heritage Park and the Kitsumgallum cemetery at the head of the Frank Trail as municipal heritage sites.

In making the request on behalf of the Terrace Regional Museum society, president Mamie Kerby pointed out there were no such sites here since the removal several years ago of the heritage designation from the old provincial police building at the corner of Kalum and Lakelse.

Kerby said the next step would be to try for provincial designation for the two sites.

Play dollars okayed, maybe

A REQUEST for city dollars to help install new playground equipment at Kiti K'Shan primary school has been given a firm maybe.

Council agreed to "consider" a $5,000 grant, one third of the cost, provided the school district came up with the same amount. Volunteer labour will be used to install the equipment.

Expenses by-law passed

COUNCIL HAS approved a by-law setting out what expenses and how much its members can claim.

The by-law sets the per diem rate at $50 a day and mileage allowances at 32 cents/km if a private vehicle is used at the city's request and 20 cents/km. if at the mayor or councillor's own request.

It also allows payment of spouses' expenses to attend one convention per year.

Although expenses rules were previously dealt with through a council policy, administrator Bob Hallsor explained the Municipal Act now required it be done through a by-law.

Facts about KCP

The public review of KCP will turn its attention to fishery-related topics in hearings that are scheduled to begin on April 11. To provide a few basic facts on this subject before the next hearings, we are repeating information that appeared in previous advertisements.

Q. Will flows on the Nechako River really be reduced to 12 per cent if KCP goes ahead?

A. This figure has been used by people who compare post-KCP flows with those that existed before the first Kemano project. It bears no relation to Alcan's proposals as far as today's Nechako River is concerned.

KCP would reduce the mean annual flow in the uppermost reach of the Nechako to 47 per cent of the existing flow. But it's important to remember that most of the diverted water would be drawn from peak flows in the summer, stabilizing April-to-September flows at about the levels that are now present each year in the early fall.

The effect of KCP diversion becomes less and less as downstream rivers and tributaries add to the total flow. At Vanderhoof, for example, the post-KCP mean annual flow would be 71 per cent of the present flow. West of Prince George at Isle Pierre, the figure is 88 per cent. The Fraser River, where it is joined by the Nechako at Prince George, would flow at 97 per cent of its present annual rate.

Q. Will the reduced flows be enough to maintain chinook stocks?

A. Yes. Flows at spawning time will be similar to present flows, which offer excellent spawning habitat.

Close to 90 per cent of the present flow -- a reduction from 1,098 to 1,000 cubic feet per second below Cheslatta Falls -- would be maintained after KCP in the spawning season. The target is an average of 3,100 adults returning to spawn each September, within a range of 1,700 to 4,000 in any year. The annual average over the past 10 years was 2,043.

Another important factor for the Nechako's chinook population is the maintenance of habitat for rearing once eggs have hatched. This was one of the broad questions of chinook conservation resolved under the 1987 Settlement Agreement that Alcan signed with provincial and federal authorities. The Agreement established flow patterns that would be needed throughout the year, as well as a staged program of remedial measures.

AIDS testing here at local health unit

CONFIDENTIAL AIDS testing is now available through the Skeena Health Unit offices in Terrace.

The service has been available for a few weeks now and provides information on AIDS and offers tests for HIV — the virus that leads to AIDS.

"No information goes anywhere else other than between the nurse and the client," says public health nursing assistant administrator Marlene Travis.

She said the service offers an alternative for people who either don't have medical coverage or who don't want to go to their doctor's office to get the test.

"Clients can use initials, numbers, first names or whatever they want to call themselves," Travis added.

The results come back about two weeks later under whatever name or number the person gave. Tests are carried out Fridays from 1 to 3 p.m. and require an appointment.

"We still encourage people to go to their doctors to get tested," says medical health officer Dr. David Bowering. "But we've found through experience that some people don't want to do that."

Bowering says 20 people have tested HIV-positive in the region over the several years that AIDS testing has been carried out through doctors' offices. He said 5,000 tests have been performed.

"Some of those people have died," he said. "I honestly don't know what the real prevalence is."

He says he's pleased the numbers have so far remained quite low.

But he added nobody knows for sure the real number of HIV-positive people out there.

"I'm concerned there are a pool of people who are positive but who haven't been tested."

He said health officials have sometimes seen a flurry of AIDS cases come out of a small community where they had no idea anyone was positive at all.

In the past, Bowering said, many people who thought they were HIV-positive went to Vancouver for testing to ensure anonymity.

Those people don't show up in the region's records, he says.

Bowering said he's now carrying out a survey of doctors in the region, asking them how many AIDS patients and HIV-positive people they have in their practices.

OLYMPIC VICTORY

Stealth car eludes lasers

ANY FASTER and it would have warped the very fabric of time and space.

Well, okay, maybe that's a tad dramatic.

But the Caledonia Sr. Secondary star performer at the 1994 Physics Olympics — a fan-powered balsa wood and aluminum car — went so fast even UBC's laser-guided timing devices couldn't pick it up.

Cal student Norm Dreger said they demanded officials recalibrate the laser beam timers, but it was impossible.

In order to get a time that could be picked up in their second run, the Caledonia students had to put bits of masking tape on the car's flag so that it would show up better.

The second run was slower, they say, but it was still good enough for first place out of 48 teams competing from across the province.

And it helped boost Cal to a second-place finish overall in the seven-event competition.

Caledonia students Curtis Bretherick, Norm Dreger, Dustin Dunbar, Bob Freeman, Tony Humphrey, Steven Loptson, Erin Parr and Anne Vu were the members of the team that travelled to UBC for the 1994 Physics Olympics on Mar. 5.

According to the rules, the fan-propelled car had to be powered by a one kilogram mass that dropped a distance of one metre.

Most teams used the mass to wind up a rubber band to power the car's fan.

Most cars, however, only travelled a few inches because they brought the tower and the weight along with them.

The Caledonia students used a separate tower and mass that wound up the rubber band on the car, and then detached from it.

As a result, the ultra-light Caledonia car was able to travel more than 10 metres, and covered the required two-metre distance in 1.06 seconds.

"We would have done even better if they took our first time," says Dreger.

"They say it was slower, but it was kind of like the fish that got away," says Allen Wootton, their teacher.

The group also came second in the rubber-band powered boat contest and they were one of the few groups whose calculations were correct in the ballistic egg contest.

"They really have to work like a team in order to build on each other's strengths," says Wootton.

"There are maybe a dozen teams in the province that are really competitive," he says. "To do well against that dozen, you have to be really good."

It's not the first time Wootton's students have been on the medal podium at UBC.

Three years ago, Caledonia students were Olympians when they took second place overall, and four years ago they were first.

The Cal students also got a tour of the TRIUMF particle accelerator facility at UBC.

■ New recruits to the Green Team

YOUNG COMPOSTERS Hannah Kantola and Dan Hicks, in Grade 4 at Parkside Elementary School, grab a desperately struggling mass of red wrigglers from inside a composting container during a tour of the school by B.C. Environment's Green Team. They eat shredded newspaper, pears, apples, vegetable scraps and a lot more, Dan says informatively. Their class at Parkside will become the 'Green Team' for the school and will try to pass their knowledge on to other classes. Green Team workshops also took place at Clarence Michiel Elementary and Copper Mountain Elementary.

Beauty grows with age for cactus

MANY WHO go to church at Sacred Heart Parish often stop to admire the beautiful Christmas cactus in the entry.

The cactus is now 52 years old and blooms beautifully three times a year.

It once belonged to Mrs. Lea Dakin and it first got its start in northern Alberta.

Now I'll tell you just a little of its owner.

George Dakin was born in 1897 at Chandler, Que. Lea Lealievre was born at Grande Riviere, Que. in 1900.

They were married Aug. 5, 1919 after George returned from the First World War.

They and 16 other members of their family all moved and took up homesteading in northern Alberta, 186 miles from Edmonton, on 18 quarters of land.

They broke the land with horses and grubhoe and lots of elbow grease.

While living their seven children were born: daughters Leonie, Georgette and Millie, and sons Paul, Leonel, Roger, Bernard.

When the children were old enough they first went to a small schoolhouse named the Dakin school after granddad Dakin, the first settler in the area.

As they got older, the children gradually left home, with some getting married and moving on.

In 1961, Mr. and Mrs. Dakin decided to leave their farm they had first settled on back in 1919 with son Roger staying on the farm.

They moved to Edmonton, living with their daughter Leonie and her husband Leo Duplessis.

In 1967 they moved to Terrace with Leonie and Leo.

Leo Duplessis built a brake shop which was located behind the west end store. Leo ran the shop until 1972.

Mr. George Dakin passed away on July 1, 1977. Mrs. Lea Dakin followed her husband on Oct 17, 1977.

The Christmas cactus started with a small slip Mrs. Dakin had received from her mother-in-law back on the farm in Alberta.

It came with them first to Edmonton then to Terrace.

After her mother passed away, Leonie was looking for a good home for it and asked father Jordan if the church had room for it.

And at 52 years old, this beautiful plant certainly adds much colour to the entrance of the church. One blooming had 160 blossoms.

On Saturday, Feb. 19, I was invited to a luncheon at the home of Edilgard Gellert on Straume Ave.

A few ladies of the Terrace Leprosy Mission gathered together to celebrate the 98th birthday of one of their special members — Beth Hollom.

Edilgard had prepared a beautiful lunch with some wonderfully delicious desserts.

Also noted was the 42nd wedding anniversary of Edilgard and Arthur earlier in the month.

The ladies all shared together in singing of hymns with some prayers for family and friends.

Norah Genis played a few tunes on the piano and I must say it was a lovely afternoon.

This poem was read for Beth by Betty Bellamy:

*Let me grow lovely, growing old
So many fine things do;
Lace and ivory and gold.
And silk need not be new.
There is healing in old trees,
old streets a glamour hold.
Why may not I, as well as these,
Grow lovely, growing old?*

The Terrace Leprosy Mission is on its 38th year, with Muriel Rowe and Margaret Fraser as the founders of the Terrace group.

Anyone interested can call Betty Bellamy at 635-6248.

HISTORIC PLANT: Dakin family members Roger, Leonie and Bernard posed with their mother's 52-year-old Christmas cactus at Sacred Heart Parish during Christmas Eve Mass.

ORPHANS Energy is in the air

"PHILLIP, you hear me! You home, Phillip!"

When John McGowan calls out across the stage tomorrow night, his words aim to pull you into an intense, gritty world you've never seen before.

The backstage talk says it'll happen. A whisper behind the set, a glance between actors, the energy in the air — the entire mood surrounding Terrace Little Theatre's latest production, Orphans, says it's on the cutting edge of theatre.

"It's a strong play," says director Marianne Weston. "It's gripping, but parts of it are quite funny, too. Be prepared to be entertained as well as moved."

The story follows two brothers on their own — one a sheltered young boy, the other a street-hardened punk. When a gangster suddenly drops into the scene, their lives are completely transformed.

"There's some coarse language in this script," Weston says. "It's a part of the world these boys inhabit. This is a side of life that's totally foreign to many people."

"Parts of it will rip your heart out," she says. "But in the end, you'll see the play is really about love."

Do not fear, spring is near

BY GUNTER LENARDT

THE requirements of most herbs are at least 5 hours of sunshine and a well drained soil.

Without these needs they will grow spindly, meagerly, and will have a poor flavor.

It helps to cut down a few tree branches obstructing the sunshine or plant them in tubs or pots which you can move around to sunny places.

There are a number of herbs that tolerate shade or partial shade such as balm, mint, borage, chervil, parsley and sweet woodruff.

Raised beds, bordered with concrete blocks, bricks or stones are also helpful.

Dig deep, at least 12 inches, to prepare the soil.

Lighten it with peat moss and add some coarse sand to improve the drainage if the soil is heavy or has a high percentage of clay.

Also add some compost, well-rotted manure or leaf mold.

Generally, herbs do better in a neutral or slightly alkaline soil.

Condition the soil with all these ingredients. One can obtain a kit from any gardening centre.

Apply a light dressing of lime if the acidity is more than 7.5 on the PH scale.

Planting herbs

Growing herbs from seeds might be the most inexpensive way, but this requires patience and time. On the other hand it often produces many more plants than you really need.

You can start some slow growing plants, as marjoram, thyme, parsley, mint and chives indoors six to eight weeks before the last frost (indoors).

Others should be planted no more than 4 weeks before the last expected frost.

Then put them outdoors after the last frost, but cover them overnight. You never know...

Plant the seeds in flats or pots containing sterilized potting soil, mix it with perlite, cover with plastic and place them in a warm place with only dim light. Keep them damp until germination.

GUNTER'S GARDEN

Remove the plastic and move the plants to a bright area as soon as the seeds sprout.

To prevent 'dampening off' (Rotting caused by too much dampness), make sure there is ample ventilation and apply fertilizer 14 days after germination.

Harden your plants off by placing them outdoors before they get spindly. You can do this by using a cold frame which you cover up during a cold night.

Do not forget to remove the cover after sunrise! Happy gardening!

Natasha Flavell, Pamela Kurth, Tyler Noble and Jennifer Flavell taking on senior crib shark Betty Demmitt. Other seniors participating in the club were Bob Goodvin, Joe Schulmeister, and Bea Barnett.

Fashionable starter home

By M. Tynan
GL-627

Low square footage and a simple foundation and roof design should keep construction costs down on this charming basement home. At only 34'-0" wide and 45'-0" deep, it will fit on a variety of lots. As well, the majority of the basement can be finished later on when time and finances allow.

Enter into the foyer. To the right, a den complete with a walk-in closet could be used as a home office or as a fourth bedroom. Upstairs, an open plan for the living and dining room created a spacious area for entertaining and features a vaulted ceiling and gas fireplace in the living room. The kitchen provides an efficient working layout complete with a pantry and a nook.

Both secondary bedrooms feature boxed out window seats. The master, like those in larger homes, features a walk-in closet and a three piece ensuite.

Plans for GL-627 may be obtained for $335.99 for a package of five complete sets of working prints and $29.99 for each additional set of the same plan. Allow $15.00 extra to cover the cost of postage and handling (B.C. residents add applicable sales tax to plan total) (All Canadian residents add 7% GST to plan total plus postage and handling).

This is one of our new designs. Many innovative plans are now available in our NEW 30th edition plan catalogue for $13.85 including postage and handling and 7% GST.

Please make all cheques, money orders, and Visa or MasterCard authorizations payable to: The Terrace Standard Plan of the Week, 13659-108th Avenue, Surrey, B.C., V3T 2K4.

Danny Ansems is president, Michael Ansems is vice president, Solveig Adair is secretary, Chad Buhr is treasurer and Kirsten Muller is club reporter.

The club started the year with public speaking. With all members in attendance, Danny Ansems, Michael Ansems and Phillip Durand placed first, second and third respectively for juniors. For seniors, Solveig Adair was first, Trevor Muller was second and Carol Kozier was third.

Danny and Michael Ansems, Solveig Adair and Trevor Muller all went on to compete at the districts.

Solveig repeated her win with Trevor right behind. Michael Ansems surprised his brother by placing first. Medals were presented by Steve Cook.

The group will go on to regional competition later this year in Kitimat.

Pogey piece poor

THE MARCH 14 issue of BC Report takes a run at the unemployment insurance system and commercial fishermen in its feature article entitled "On the hook for pogey".

"UI critics," says the article, "are bound to single out the fishing industry as a perfect example of where the system no longer provides workers with insurance against the unexpected and involuntary job loss, but which has become, in the words of (Lloyd) Axworthy: 'A perpetual form of income supplement.'"

The piece goes on to explain commercial fishermen need only 10 days spread over 10 weeks to be eligible for benefits lasting from May Day until Nov. 15, that each fisherman need only return with $156 worth of fish — 20 fish at $8 each — in each week to qualify, and fishermen can still collect unemployment insurance even though they have netted $100,000 in income.

In its zeal to foster indignation, the article omits to mention this is allowable under the present rules. It also fails to offer suggestions for reform.

"Experts," the article goes on to say, "estimate that for every $1 fishermen contribute in the form of UI premiums, $10 is taken out in the form of benefits." Just who these experts are is not made clear, to be expected from BC Report, a periodical that can never be accused of balanced journalism.

Similarly, the piece asserts many fishermen do not look for employment when on UI benefits, but rather use them as an opportunity to loaf in bars, ski and take foreign vacations. This is pretty strong stuff, strong enough to warrant some specific examples. Yet none are given.

Later, the article concedes gillnet fishermen average only $30,000 per year out of which must come maintenance, moorage and other expenses. It becomes clear the income subsidy of UI is a necessity if many fishermen are to stay afloat.

The article cites noted economist Peter Pearce who advocates scrapping UI for fishermen because there are presently too many boats chasing too few fish. Pearce, according to the article, would like to see half the number of boats.

Without the UI subsidy, Pearce predicts, "many fishermen and crewmen would decide the industry wasn't worth the effort and would move on to more productive activities."

This seems awfully simplistic. Dr. Pearce makes no mention of what those other productive activities might be. There just aren't a lot of employment opportunities around. It is more likely a lot of these men will wind up collecting UI until they wind up on the welfare rolls at an even greater cost to the government.

Pearce's vision sees fewer, larger, better equipped boats run by business-minded skippers exploiting the salmon stocks. But this Darwinistic outlook does not address the central problem with our west coast fisheries.

True, large boats are capable of catching large numbers of fish with greater efficiency and the incomes of skippers and crews of those large boats may be high, but the number of fish caught would still be high too and it would be indiscriminate. The by-catch problem would still exist.

For the fishery to be economically robust, the stocks must be healthy. Dr. Pearce took pains to point this out in his well-known, highly respected report to the federal government some years back.

To ensure stock abundance, the fishery must be able to target commercially desirable stocks capable of withstanding higher harvest rates while simultaneously demonstrating sensitivity to weaker stocks. Only then will the continuance of the fishery be assured and its long term economic viability maintained.

The size and harvesting power of boats has little to do with their ability to fish selectively. How boats fish, where they fish and when they fish are the critical issues. It's conceivable a lot of small community-based boats, using modified gear, restricted by area regulations and propped up by income subsidies may be the best way to guarantee a sustainable resource, minimize social disruption and ensure the needs of all the beneficiaries of the resource are met.

Author Jerry Collins quotes one Dr. Grubel, a Reform Party MP, who says, "Let's admit that (UI) was a noble experiment that didn't work."

I'm not convinced unemployment insurance has failed. And nothing in this piece convincingly proves it is unnecessary.

"There is little room for propping up inefficient industries" in our debt-ridden country, says Collins.

I look forward to a piece by him that examines the massive subsidies, in the form of tax breaks, stumpage rates and land give-aways, given to giant corporations that continue to plunder our resources in so many lucrative but environmentally inefficient ways.

PeeWees primed for AA provincial title bid

"JUST BECAUSE they're from the big smoke doesn't mean they're better."

That's a reminder coach Steve Smyth will be giving Terrace PeeWee players as they enter the 'AA' provincial championships starting here Sunday.

The other will be to stay loose. Understandably, the team is pretty excited about the event, "but we don't want them too keyed up," he pointed out.

Although he's not about to start predicting where the team will finish, Smyth is confident it has as good a chance as many of its opponents.

While there were a lot of rookies on the local squad, he was pleased with the way they had come together over the course of the season.

Terrace's last outing, a two-game zone playoff series against Kitimat, had also been impressive.

Terrace dropped both games but

"Come down and watch tomorrow's super stars today."..... Steve Smyth

only by a single goal scored in the final minute of play, encouraging results since Kitimat is ranked near the top of this year's championship crop.

The draw has put Terrace in the five team B division where every opponent is an unknown quantity.

"We've only played against 100 Mile (House) and Kitimat," Smyth explained, both of which are on the A side.

However, that lack of first hand knowledge cuts both ways, he pointed out.

And Terrace could have a slight edge from being the home team. "It's odd to be at home," Smyth admitted, adding the much travelled local PeeWees know only too well the potentially draining pattern of long journey, living out of hotel rooms and eating out all the time.

However, when the whistle goes, it'll still be the quality of hockey that'll decide the game.

The schedule has Terrace being thrown in at the deep end right away with a game against Dawson Creek, one of the top-two ranked teams.

"We'll find out where we stand in that game," Smyth said, adding a big home-town crowd cheering the team on could provide an important lift.

Terrace seems assured that kind of support for their second game, against Winfield. The puck on that one drops at 8:30 Sunday evening, immediately after the opening ceremonies.

They then get a full day's rest before tangling with Seafair 7:30 p.m. Monday and wrap up the round robin Tuesday afternoon against Port Alberni.

Playoff games takes place Wednesday with the third place decider and championship game scheduled for 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. Thursday, respectively.

Will Terrace fans be cheering on their own in that final?

"A lot of odd things can happen in a short tournament," Smyth said. Hot goal tending or a run of inspired play could make any team a real contender.

One thing is certain, however. "People will see clean, fast hockey and a lot of skillful young players."

With body checking prohibited, Smyth said the emphasis was on skating, passing and shooting.

His final message to Terrace residents: "Come down and watch tomorrow's super stars today."

It'll be a lot of years before we host another provincial championship, he added.

Return of the wheels deal

THE SPIEL for Wheels is back at the Men's Loggers Bonspiel.

As if $11,000 of prizes weren't enough, organizers of the March 30 - April 3 event are once again giving curlers a chance to win a new car.

Introduced last year, the Spiel for Wheels was an instant hit with players and spectators alike.

Every team entered in the Loggers has a shot at the car or cash prizes of up to $1,000.

Each member of the team throws one rock, no sweeping, and tries to cover the pin hole in the centre of the button with part of the running surface of the rock.

If they all succeed in doing that, every member of the team goes home in a brand new car.

This year it will be a 1994 Cavalier RS 4-door complete with air conditioning, AM/FM cassette, power door locks and more provided by Jim McEwan Motors, joint sponsors of the event in conjunction with the Terrace Standard.

But there's more than that one way to win a car.

If only three of the players cover the pin they each win a car.

If only two, they've automatically won $1,000 and still have a chance at a car.

Each of the two successful shooters gets another rock to throw and if either repeats the feat, they both get a new set of wheels.

Even if only one of the players succeeds at his first attempt, there's money to be won. He'll be given two more shots and if either covers the hole, he'll pick up a cheque for $500.

MIXING IT UP. Bobbie Phillips keeps a close eye on the incoming rock during 'B' event quarter final action at this year's Totem Mixed bonspiel, the penultimate major event for this curling season. All night leagues are now going into playoffs with finals set for Friday, March 25. The '93-'94 finale takes place a week later when men's teams gather for the Loggers, the northwest's largest 'spiel.

And the bonspiel organizers have decided to add one more way to win.

Anyone who covers the pin will have their name go into a hat for a draw for $100 cash, enough to cover their Loggers entry and then some.

The McEwan Motors/Terrace Standard Spiel for Wheels will take place during the traditional Saturday afternoon break from curling.

There is no additional charge to enter the event but the team that takes part must be the same as the one entered in the Loggers. In other words, no stacked rinks.

THE PERFECT TURN

Parallel Turns

The parallel turn is what we all hope to achieve in our skiing. To perfect these turns, it is necessary to work on some of the basic skiing skills. First, remember to move all of your weight onto the outside ski of the turn. It is important to flow with gravity down the mountain to allow for an easier turn with less resistance. This will allow your muscles to be more relaxed, which will, in turn, give you better balance and performance out of your skiing.

Director of Skier Services

Next, try turning your feet as you progress through the turn. Begin turning your feet as you pressure your outside ski, allowing your skis to carve a smooth and continuous arch in the snow.

It is important that you experiment with these skills in bigger GS type turns. The progress to the smaller, shorter radius turns. Good turns, great skiing.

Wild Ones tamed

THE BLADES are ready to carve up anyone who gets in their way.

The Klimat squad did just that to fellow travellers the Wild Ones in OPOV III floor hockey action, destroying the New Aiyanshers 19-5 in their first round robin game.

Paul Amado led the demolition with five goals, Gary Barbosa added our and Kevin Graham picked up a hattrick.

The Blades will be back in action tomorrow night at the Thornhill Community Centre (8 p.m.) but probably won't find this one so easy.

That's because they'll be up against the Westpoint Warriors and their net-finding trio of Craig Inglebrison, Howie O'Brien and Willy Wilson.

They combined for 11 goals in a 14-4 shellacking of the Terrace Chimo Redmen last Thursday as the Warriors made it clear they were not about to roll over in Division 'B'.

Over in 'A' Division, it's shaping up to be a much tighter battle.

The Possee, Big Buds and Traffic Jams have each picked up the vital first win, but only narrowly narrow.

The Possee were to take on the Trojans last night while Buds and the Jam go head-to-head tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in what's certain to be another tense contest.

And the early hard luck story in 'A' division is the Blue Whities who are 0-2 on losses by two and one goals.

But that could be reversed in the second season. The format sends the top four in each division to the playoffs.

With the first round being a one game do-or-die, anything could happen.

Next Tuesday, the All-Star game takes centre stage at 7 p.m.

■ Classic battle

ELEMENTARY STUDENTS were promoted to the Jr. Secondary level Saturday as grade six-ers headed for the Skeena gym to take part in their annual Girls Basketball tourney. Above, Clarence Michiel Classics mount another attack against the Copper Mountain Tritons on the way to their second round-robin victory. See next week's Standard for the final result.

Sport Scope

Charitable contracts

LOCAL DUPLICATE bridge club members will be joining fellow enthusiasts across North America to raise money for charity tonight.

The event is the Spring American Contract Bridge League (ACBL) Charity Game.

Money raised goes to the Canadian Bridge Federation charitable fund which has designated the Kid's Help Line, Canadian Guide Dogs for the Blind and Parkinson's Foundation of Canada as recipients on this occasion.

The Terrace club's game starts at 7:30 p.m. in the cafeteria at Caledonia Sr. Secondary school and the public is invited to take part.

There will be prizes for ACBL-wide winners as well as victors in each of the organization's 25 districts. And master points will be awarded to all those who finish well in each and every game.

For more information, contact Ian Munro (638-8720) or Dave Comfort (635-4875).

Ladies come close

TERRACE ENTRIES found B event to their liking at the 26-rink Western Ladies Bonspiel in Prince Rupert.

Unfortunately, an all-Terrace final was not in the cards as the draw brought Denise Sawtell and Lyn Apolczer up against each other in the semis.

Sawtell took that game but could not overpower Jean Billing's hometown quartet and had to settle for second. That gave Apolczer fourth spot.

Tomorrow night it's the men's turn to spiel in Prince Rupert with entrants in the Marine taking to the ice. That wraps up Sunday afternoon.

Snoopy on a roll

SNOOPY BOWLING Buddies are under way on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings and there's still six weeks left for local youngsters to get involved.

Open to kids five years and under, the leagues play at 11:30 a.m. each day. For a $10 registration fee and $4.50 per week, participants get a Snoopy sweatshirt, a game of bowling and a Snoopy meal of hot dog, bag of chips and small pop.

There's also trophies and goodies at the end of the season with a chance to pick up coupons during the league. The leagues are sponsored by Dairy Queen.

All a'board at Shames

THE NORTH WEST Snowboard association has another meet planned, running April 1-3 at the Ranch, the specially constructed boarding area at Shames Mountain.

Snow boarders from across the north are expected to converge on Terrace to take part in the half pike, giant slalom and jib park competitions.

Organizer Jeff Doll is also looking at having live bands on hand. For more information, phone him at 638-8878.

Kayakers take note

ANYONE interested in kayaking, be they beginners or advanced, should note the dates may 20-23.

That's when the Coast Kayak '94 Symposium will be held at Pioneer Camp on Thetis Island. Workshops will include navigations, kayak photography low impact camping and emergency procedures.
